

Accountability, Dependability, Responsibility

R. EDDIE DAVIDSON HAS LITIGATED or consulted in catastrophic injury cases in more than 25 states. With a "less is more" philosophy, he takes on a small number of cases to which he can devote in-depth attention to families who have suffered losses from another's inattention, carelessness or irresponsibility.

PRACTICE AREAS Fuel explosions and fire cases demand intense investigation and analysis, and they also require a working relationship with qualified engineering experts. Davidson's experience in fire and explosion cases has resulted in successful results for clients like Rusty and Kathy King. "Kathy and I cannot adequately express our gratitude for your efforts in resolving this case," reads a testimonial from Rusty. "You have shown us what a lawyer should be. You are humble, you believe in helping the 'little man.' Initially, you signed on to be our legal representative. Over time you have become a good friend."

Davidson is a member of the American Association of Justice's (AAJ) gas and fire litigation group. He also has extensive experience in litigating trucking injury cases and is a member of the AAJ's interstate trucking litigation group.

Davidson has served as attorney of record in numerous seven-figure jury verdicts, settlements and mediations. A significant portion of his practice is devoted to consulting and assisting other lawyers in preparing and trying cases. Attorney Daniel Rodriguez of Bakersfield, Calif., wrote, "I would like to express my gratitude for your help in the Calderon v. Nanek Farms case. This case was one of the toughest I have ever handled. I could not have done it without your help. I thank you, but, more significantly, the families of the two boys thank you."

TEACHER AND AUTHOR Davidson is a tenured faculty member with the National College of Advocacy, the educational arm of the AAJ. He is currently writing a book on the modern jury trial titled Less is More—Simpler is Better.

RECOGNITION The Nashville Business Journal named him "Best of the Bar." He is included in the Martindale-Hubbell® Bar Registry of Preeminent Lawyers, and has held its AV rating for several years.

He is certified as a civil trial specialist by the Tennessee Commission on Continuing Legal Education and Specialization.
